THERE was a large attendance at the United Service Institution on the 10th inst. when a long discussion took place on the prize easays upon England's Maritime Supremacy. Sir Vesey Hamilton presided. The question was raised in relation to the prize essay by Captain Craigie, and an essay by Lieuten int Hyde Smith. Most of the speakers agreed with the authors of the papers that our naval forces should be supplemented by fixed defences at ports at Home and abroad to resist raid or attack by one or more cruisers for a few days, and to offer a safe refuge for our warships and mercantile marine while coaling, loading, unloading, or under repairs:

A CORRESPONDENT of the London Daily News writes :- 'n the new pharmacopoeia now in course of preparation, the metric weights and measures will be adopted throughout, to the entire exclusion of the English weights and measures hitherto used. It is cousidered by many that this is but the thin end of the wedge, and that sooner or leter the metric weights and measures will be adopted for all purposes in the United S'a'es. In all the States of Fouth America this system and none other is in use, and there is a growing feeling that an international system of weights and measures will do much to simplify and develop the commercial intercourse of the nations in question, as well as those who have Port Philip, 22; Taksang, May 3; Ben- adopted the metric system in Europe.

terates the following statistics (says the London correspondent of the Manchester May 13; Kaisow, 17; Coatham, 24; Guardian) are of interest; -In the General Election of 1886 the number of illiterates peria, 7; Canfa, 10; Melbourne, who voted in England and Wales was 38,687, the number who voted in Sectiond 4,836, and the number who voted in Ireland 36,722, making a total for the United Kingdom of 60,145. If readers to back to the General Election of 1880 they will find that the number of illiterates was much smaller. In that year there voted in the boroughs and counties of England and French Mail of May 27, left Singapore of illiterates who voted in Ireland was on Wednesday, June 22, at 3 p.m., 5,312, and the number who voted in Scotand may be expected here on or about | land 198.
